Magyar Telekom s Board of Directors proposes the merger of Magyar Telekom and T-Mobile Hungary

Budapest October 6, 2005 Magyar Telekom (Reuters: NYSE: MTA.N, BÉT: MTEL.BU and Bloomberg: NYSE: MTA US, BÉT: MTELEKOM HB), the leading Hungarian telecommunications service provider, today announced that the Board of Directors made a proposal for the merger of Magyar Telekom and its 100% owned subsidiary, T-Mobile Hungary. The proposal is in line with the mid-term strategy announced in 2004, which emphasized the utilization of Group-level synergies as one of its key pillars. After the merger, T-Mobile will continue to operate under an independent brand and as an independent line of business within the Magyar Telekom Group.

In line with the Magyar Telekom Group's mid-term strategy announced in 2004, Magyar Telekom's Board of Directors today made a proposal for the merger of Magyar Telekom and T-Mobile Hungary. The merger will encourage long-term sustainable value creation for Magyar Telekom Group, especially in areas such as maintaining and improving the customer base, optimizing efficiency and cost levels and using the advantages offered by new innovative technologies.

The idea of harmonizing fixed and mobile areas is not unique; several European national operators with both fixed-line and mobile operations have realized the strategic advantages and possibilities resulting from convergence.

The merger will enable Magyar Telekom to achieve improvements in efficiency, profitability and cash-flow in the coming years. Following the transaction, the Group will have more scope to offer its customers joint services and new value added offers, to further integrate sales activities and better utilize the joint T brand in marketing and communication. Cost efficiency will be further improved through common back office solutions and the consolidation of parallel activities. Following the full implementation of the integration and synergy process, the combined annual financial benefit is expected to reach several tens of billions forints within a few years.

Merger milestones

The Board proposal is subject to approval by the Shareholders' Meeting of both companies. The merger process will end with the registration by the Court of Registry. Following court registration, T-Mobile will continue its operations within Magyar Telekom under an independent brand and as an independent line of business.

There is no legal obstacle to the merger, it complies with applicable national and international laws. As T-Mobile Hungary is already a fully owned Magyar Telekom subsidiary, the planned step does not require approval from the Hungarian Competition Authority.
