ITEM 2. MANAGEMENT'S DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS AND PLAN OF OPERATIONS

MANAGEMENT'S DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS AND PLAN OF OPERATIONS

Plan of Operation

Our plan of operation has been strongly affected by delays in the Certification of the Enhanced Vision System by the Federal Aviation Administration. The final flight tests are scheduled to be complete by August 2001. The granting of the Supplemental Type Certification will allow our EVS to start production with initial sales in 2001.

By January 2002, we shall have sufficient visibility on sales in 2002 and beyond to make reasonable projections of our anticipated royalties from these sales. Positive cash flow should be achieved by 3rd quarter of 2002.

The certification delays have put us three years behind our original schedule. These delays have forced us to use a line of credit to meet operational expenditures as well as delaying other new product ventures.

Our current line of credit is adequate for our projected operating costs. We continue to explore other avenues of Capital infusion, but the requirement for these funds is tied to discretionary expenditures on new product and new markets.

The new products and markets we have been exploring are all in Infrared Camera applications for specific applications. These applications are: Recreational Vehicle Systems, Security Systems, and Medical System Applications.

We have engaged in a strategic partnership arrangement with Telesis Technologies Inc., a Taiwanese private corporation. Our talents appear to be complementary, and we are exploring many opportunities to expand our joint participation. Currently, our partnership is limited to the Recreational Vehicle System venture.
