A Combined AT&T-DirecTV Merger Will Help Bring
Over-the-Top Services to More Americans

Consumers are increasingly using their broadband connections to access over-the-top (OTT) content from companies such as Netflix, Amazon, Google, and Hulu— more than 50 percent of U.S. broadband households use one or more paid OTT video services

For consumers, OTT video is low-cost, ubiquitous, and flexible; thus, it is a highly popular substitute for, as well as a complement to, traditional standalone pay TV services.

The transaction will help us meet consumers' evolving video preferences and propel the development of new OTT products by:

Expanding Broadband:

- The combined company commits to:
 - o providing FTTP wireline broadband service to 2 million more customer locations; and
 - o deploying fixed wireless local loop (“WLL”) technology to bring high-speed broadband to approximately 13 million largely rural customer locations.
- Widening AT&T's broadband deployment will make OTT services available to millions of people who currently lack sufficient connectivity to enjoy these services.

Enhancing Services:

- The combined company's integrated video, broadband, and mobile operations will better position it to meet consumers' evolving entertainment preferences on any screen: TV, tablet, smartphone, or PC.
 - In areas where AT&T currently offers wireline IP broadband service, the combined company will, for three years after closing, continue to offer standalone wireline broadband service at reasonable market-based prices, including a service with speeds of at least 6 Mbps down (where feasible) at a 12-month price no greater than $34.95 per month*.
- § This commitment will guarantee benefits for those customers who want only a broadband service and may choose to consume video through OTT services like Netflix or Hulu
- New bundled offerings (i.e. Video + Broadband) will allow subscribers to integrate traditional linear video with on-demand and OTT services in ways that create a richer, more flexible and increasingly ubiquitous video experience.

Offering More and Better Content:

- As a national video provider that also has large-scale wireline and wireless broadband delivery platforms, the combined company will be well-positioned to build on DIRECTV's longstanding relationships with content providers, including its relationships with sports networks. That will allow the combined company to negotiate for the flexible digital rights required to design and structure new OTT programming services for consumers' varying needs.

*Provided that the price can be increased by no more than any increase in the Consumer Price Index for All Urban Consumers (CPI-U) for Communications every 12 months starting 12 months following deal close.
